

Concerned groups around the world have created thousands of foundations that bring some form of relief to millions of people and animals around the world. It is a testament to the goodness in humanity that so many have chosen to devote their lives to helping their fellow man. For many years, the successful industrialist Dax has anonymously contributed to many of these wonderful organizations and he continues to actively donate time and resources to many worthy groups.

While continuing to maintain a very low profile as it relates to his philanthropic activities, Dax has also been privately funding a number of important charitable initiatives for a number of years and has chosen to consolidate them under a single banner with the establishment and launch of the Dax Foundation, a California-based non-profit charitable organization. These steps were taken during 2007 to streamline the operations of these multiple, previously independent entities and to generate awareness for the common themes that is the lifeblood of each of these initiatives. Each are founded upon Dax's staunch belief in the value and significance of every life, whether animal or human, and in the awesome power and societal benefits that can result when people have the opportunity to passionately pursue their dreams and lead more fulfilling and productive lives.

To quote T.E. Lawrence, also known as Lawrence of Arabia:

“All men dream: but not equally. Those who dream by night in the dusty recesses of their minds wake in the day to find that it was vanity: but the dreamers of the day are dangerous men, for they may act their dream with open eyes, to make it possible.”

Equally important to Dax is the preciousness of every individual's dreams. Everyday life can break a person's willingness and ability to hold on to those wonderful dreams that they're born with. The result is an insidious dissatisfaction, cynicism and unhappiness that has run rampant in modern society. The Dax Foundation seeks to restore people's ability to look into their hearts and breathe fresh life into their dreams and aspirations.

These values lay at the core of the Dax Foundation and are the embodiment of Dax's vision and beliefs. The Foundation invests heavily in identifying those individuals with a passion to serve their fellow man and our animal companions. Under the leadership of our Executive Director David Weisman, the Foundation dedicated staff actively seeks opportunities to implement programs that have the ability to relieve suffering and inspire a passion to serve humanity for all who come into contact with it.

Current Foundation initiatives include work in a range of areas including programs designed to benefit and provide assistance to severely disabled children, abused and neglected animals, under-resourced performing arts organizations, people suffering from organ failure in need of a life-saving organ donation and people suffering from poverty and drought in disadvantaged areas of the world.